

2014 Verbania, Italy Food

A chocolate manufacturer approached our engineering department looking for a solution for temperature control its production processes by means of customised solutions.

The historical building has very compressed spaces, so we designed customised temperature control units to fit into the existing building, using materials according to the customer's vendor list.

Temperature control, as in all such processes, requires special care and refinement so as not to compromise the chocolate's special characteristics.