

Monza, Italy

The petrochemical sector has a close connection with its environment. By this is meant that waste products and fumes could dangerously affect the outside environment. To prevent this from happening, all executions must be carried out safely, with special paint cycles adapted to each situation. To cool the oil and water of multi-stage compressors in a plant, we therefore also implemented gas compression to limit the delicate chemical process.